No Home Is Complete Without an Encyclopaedia.

No encyclopædia can compare with the new, enlarged, perfected and up-to-date 30 volume edition of the great which is here offered by the Bloomingdale Encyclopædia Britannica Club at much less than publisher's prices and on easy terms of payment. The Britannica is the standard of authority the world over. Its statements are never disputed. It is the work of 1,160 of the most eminent Authors, Scholars, Scientists and Specialists of modern times, among them renowned thinkers of almost every nationality, and it is to-day the one great and perfect work of reference.

The first edition of the Britannica appeared in 1771; the ninth and last Edinburgh edition came from the press in 1889, the authorship alone costing over $3,000,000. The edition which is offered by us is practically a tenth edition, as it has, in addition to the 25 volumes composing the ninth Edinburgh edition, five supplemental volumes, bringing every subject down to date, and containing 20,000 additional biographies. It is also supplied with new Rand-McNally maps, and in point of mechanical construction is the peer of any reference work in existence. This grand library can now be obtained by an expenditure of only a few cents a day.
